α -Isoxazine,

β -Isoxazine,

—, tetrahydro-. See Morpholine.

α -Isoxazin 5(6)-one, 2-ethyl-3,4,6,6-tetraphenyl-, 1230⁹.

—, 2-methyl-3,4,6,6-tetraphenyl-, 1239⁹.

Isoazole (furo[a]monazole), spectrochemistry of derivs. of, 3385⁷.

Isoazole, 5-cresyl-3-methyl-, 1412².

—, dihydro-. See Isoxazoline.

—, 3,5-dimethyl-, zinc chloride compd.
 with, 1785⁴.

—, 3 (and 5)-methyl-5 (and 3)-phenyl-, 1944³, 1611^{3,5}.

—, 3 (and 5)-phenyl-, consts., 760^{9,5}.

5-Isoazolecarbinol, $\alpha, \alpha, 3,4$ -tetraphenyl-, 3911.

5-Isoazolecarboxylic acid, 3,4-diphenyl-, 2327⁴.

5,5-Isoazolelinedicarboxylic acid, 2-hydroxy-3,4-diphenyl-, diethyl ester, and its Cu deriv., 2327⁴.

Isoxazoline, oxides, 390⁸, 2327¹, 3168².

Δ^2 -5-Isoxazolinecarbinol, 5-hydroxy$\alpha, \alpha, 3,4$ -tetraphenyl-, 390⁸.

Δ^2 -5,5-Isoxazolinecarboxylic acid, 3,4-diphenyl-, and N-oxide, and esters, 2327^{1,2,4}.

Isoxazoline oxide, benzoyldiphenyl-, 390⁸.

1,2,6-Isoxiazine,

—, 2-acetyl-3-(2,5-cresyl)-5-methyl-, acetate, 1412⁹.

—, 2-benzoyl-5-(2,5-cresyl)-3-methyl-, benzoate, 1412⁹.

—, 3 (and 5)-(2,5-cresyl)-5 (and 3)- methyl-, 1412⁹.

electrodeposition of some metals from solns. in, 1022^a.

-HBr, addn. compd. with C₂H₅Br, 1086^a.

ionization const. of, 2108^a.

light action on, 1991¹.

3-methoxyppicrate, 1391^a.

from petroleum, 1071.

prepn. of, 204^a.

reaction with BrCN, 2640^a.

salts with phenols, 3449^a.

as solvent in the catalytic reduction of BzCl, 1396^a.

system: S-, 3628^a.

tartrates, 3294^a.

4,5,6-trinitroguaiacol salt, 1395¹.

III. FORMULA INDEX

KEY.

In using this index the following should be borne in mind:

1. The Formula Index is supplementary to the Subject Index; in no sense does it replace any part of the latter except that most of the organic compounds that were not named in the original papers are entered in the former only.
2. Inorganic as well as organic compounds have been entered.
3. Entries under their own formulas are made for all strictly inorganic and strictly organic compounds and for the true organic derivatives of organic compounds, both addition compounds and true reaction derivatives (this includes esters, hydrazones, methohalides, oximes, picates, semicarbazones, etc.). Inorganic salts of organic acids and inorganic addition compounds of organic compounds (hydrohalides, chloroplatinates, perchlorates, sulfates, etc.) are not given separate entries but are indicated in modifying phrases under the formulas of the compounds from which they are derived (under the acid in the case of a salt). Salts of formic, acetic and oxalic acids are exceptions; these are entered as such.
4. The arrangement of symbols in formulas is alphabetical except that in carbon compounds C always comes first, followed immediately by H if hydrogen is also present.
5. The arrangement of formulas is also alphabetical except that the number of atoms of any specific kind influences the order of compounds. E. g., all formulas with 1 C come before those with C₂, thus: CCl₂O, CCl₄, CHCl₃, CHN, CHNO, CH₂Br₂, CH₂O, CH₃Cl, CO, C₂Ca, C₂H₄O₂.
6. The arrangement of entries under any heading is strictly alphabetical according to the preferred names of the isomers.
7. Entries consist of (a) the formula (in bold-face type), (b) the name as it has been entered in the Subject Index (in light-face Roman type; it should be noted particularly that the part of the entry in this type is the exact equivalent of the formula given), (c) occasionally a modifying phrase or word such as "Ca salt" or "hydrochloride" (in italics, different type being used to set off that part of a compound being indexed which is not represented in the formula used; see ¶ 3 above), (d) the page reference, and (e) the fraction of the page in ninths (indicated by a small superior numeral) in which the compound will be found.
8. Cross-references are to the Subject Index.

9. Water of hydration is not made a part of the formulas indexed but is usually given in light-face type following the formulas.

10. Polymers having different names and recognized as different substances, e. g., acetaldehyde and paraldehyde, are all entered under their accepted formulas. But definite compounds for which different polymeric formulas are in use are entered under the simplest formula only with cross-references under the polymeric formulas.

11. A straight line, thus ———, used under some headings to avoid repetition of names, always stands for the name of the "index compound," i. e., that part of the preceding name (inverted) which comes before the comma.

12. "P" before a page number indicates that the abstract is of a patent.

13. The names beryllium (Be), columbium (Cb) and hafnium (Hf) are given preference over glucinum (Gl), niobium (Nb) and celtium (Ct), respectively, for these elements.

The Key to a formula index is necessarily lengthy. It would not be correct to conclude from this that this index is difficult to use. Experience is to the contrary.

INTRODUCTION.

General purpose and policy. The location of chemical compounds in an index by names is at times uncertain because names vary and in the case of complex compounds may be difficult to ascertain. New compounds are constantly being prepared, which, if named at all, may receive more than one name which is justified from one point of view or another and the possibilities of incorrect names are great. Since the kinds and number of component atoms of a chemical compound are unvarying characteristics the supplementary Formula Index to Chemical Abstracts is published for the purpose of eliminating this element of uncertainty in the Subject Index. Except that many unnamed compounds are no longer entered under the heading "Compound," the Subject Index is in no way altered on account of the Formula Index. In the Subject Index related compounds are grouped rather effectively and to good use by the present system of indexing on the basis of "parent compounds" or more accurately "index compounds;" in the Formula Index the certain location of individual compounds is the primary consideration. The Subject Index is more convenient to use in some respects and it frequently contains more information in the form of modifying phrases. The repetition of modifying phrases in the Formula Index beyond necessary brief phrases to indicate derivatives has been avoided as unnecessary for the accomplishment of the real purpose of this index, as stated above, and as inconsistent with necessary economy. Isomerism is not indicated in the Formula Index in cases in which the names differ only in position numbers or letters but it always is in the Subject Index when known. Ready reference to the Subject Index for the purpose of locating information regarding related compounds is made possible by the use in the Formula Index of names following the formulas written exactly as they appear in the former index.

All new compounds and all compounds for which new data are given have been entered. Most of the compounds have been entered under their own formulas. Some departure from a policy of making separate formula entries for derivatives of all kinds is reasonable and accords with custom. The only departures in this index (see ¶3 of the Key) have been in classes of compounds the natures of which would be more than likely apparent to the investigator. The interest in a salt of a complex organic acid, for example, is likely to be mainly in the acid and it is considered more valuable to have the record of it under the formula of the acid for the use of searchers looking up that acid.

In the case of unnamed organic compounds where possible the class, as acid, source and melting or boiling point have been given.

Cross-references to the Subject Index have been used for all simple inorganic compounds, for all minerals of definite composition and for the organic compounds more commonly met with, in general whenever it seemed likely that users of Chemical Abstracts would predominately refer to the Subject Index.

The system. The system, as described in the Key, is, with slight modifications, that worked out by Dr. Edwin A. Hill¹ and used by the Classification Division of the U. S. Patent Office. This system is preferred to the system of Richter's Lexikon because of its greater simplicity and its applicability with equal fitness to inorganic as well as to organic compounds.

ABBREVIATIONS USED IN CHEMICAL ABSTRACTS.

[α] specific rotation	cond. conductivity
($[\alpha]_D^{20}$, for 20° and sodium light)	const. constant
abs. absolute	contg. containing Ac acetyl (AcH, acetaldehyde; AcOH, acetic acid)	cor. corrected
a. c. alternating current	c. p. candle power addn. addition	c. p. chemically pure addnl. additional	crit. critical
alc. alcohol	cryst. crystalline (not crystallize)
alk. alkaline (not alkali)	crystd. crystallized
alky. alkalinity	crystn. crystallization
Am amyl	cu. m. cubic meter
amp. ampere(s)	d. density (d_{15} , specific gravity referred to water at 4°; d_4^2 referred to water at the same temperature)
amt. amount	d. c. direct current anhyd. anhydrous	decompn. decomposition
app. apparatus	deriv. derivative
approx. approximate, approximately	det. determine
aq. aqueous	detd. determined assoc. associate(s)	detg. determining assocd. associated	detn. determination assocn. association	dil. dilute
at. atomic (not atom)	diln. dilution
atm. atmosphere(s), atmospheric	dissoc. dissociate(s)
at. wt. atomic weight	dissocd. dissociated
av. average (except as a verb)	dissocn. dissociation
b. (followed by a figure denoting temperature) boils at, boiling at (similarly)	distd. distilled
Bu butyl (normal)	dist. distilling
Bz benzoyl (BzH, benzaldehyde; BzOH, benzoic acid)	elec. electric, electrical
cal. calorie(s)	e. m. f. electromotive force calc. calculate	equil. equilibrium
calcd. calculated	equiv. equivalent calcg. calculating	est. estimate calcn. calculation	estd. estimated
cc. cubic centimeter(s)	estg. estimating
c. d. current density	estn. estimation chem. chemical (not chemistry)	Et ethyl (Et ₂ O, ethyl ether)
cm. centimeter(s)	evap. evaporate
coeff. coefficient	evapd. evaporated
com. commercial	evapg. evaporating
compd. compound	evapn. evaporation
compn. composition	examd. examined conc. concentrate	examg. examining concd. concentrated	examn. examination
concn. concentration	expt. experiment exptl. experimental
	ext. extract
	extd. extracted

extg. extracting	p. p. m. parts per million
extn. extraction	ppt. precipitate
f. p. freezing point	pptd. precipitated
ft. foot, feet	pptg. precipitating
g. gram(s)	pptn. precipitation
h. p. horsepower	Pr propyl
hr. hour	prep. prepare
in. inch(es)	prepd. prepared inorg. inorganic	prepg. preparing insol. insoluble	prepn. preparation
kg. kilogram(s)	qual. qualitative
kw. kilowatt(s)	quant. quantitative
l liter(s)	recrystd. recrystallized
lab. laboratory	resp. respectively
lb. pound(s)	r. p. m. revolutions per minute
m. meter(s); also (followed by a figure denoting temperature) melts at, melt- ing at	sapon. saponification manuf. manufacture	sapond. saponified
math. mathematical	sapong. saponifying
max. maximum	sat saturate
Me methyl (MeOH, methanol)	satd. saturated
mech. mechanical	satg saturating
mfg. manufacturing	satn. saturation
mg. milligram	sec. second(s)
min. minimum (also minute(s))	sep. separate mixt. mixture	sepd. separated
mol. molecule, molecular	sepg. separating
mol. wt. molecular weight	sepn. separation
m. p. melting point	sol soluble
n index of refraction n _D ²⁰ for n _D ²⁰ and sodium light	soln. solution
N normal	soly. solubility
neg. negative	sp. specific Ala. Zinc sulfide.
no. number	sq. cm. square centimeter(s)
org. organic	sym. symmetrical
p. d. potential difference	temp. temperature
pharmacol. pharmacological	U. S. P. United States Pharmacopeia
phys. physical	v. volt(s)
physiol. physiological	vol. volume (not volatile)
pos. positive	w. watt(s)
powd. powdered	w. p. c. watts per candle
	wt. weight
